Sustainable Farming Incentive

Defra has finally released much needed detail on the Sustainable Farming Incentive. It is now possible to make an informed decision as to whether or not to proceed with an application under the new scheme, to proceed with a Countryside Stewardship Scheme application or potentially a combination of the two.

This briefing paper is a summary of the key information.

'Actions' not 'Standards'

SFI was previously designed in a way that grouped multiple land management operations/actions into 'Standards', with three ambition levels each paying a different payment rate per hectare, per metre etc.

The concept of grouping multiple actions into 'Standards' has now been scrapped and in its place are simply 'Actions'. The net result is a more flexible scheme where farmers can pick and choose the 'Actions' that work best for them. The focus is very much on the outcomes so there is also a degree of flexibility as to how the actions are carried out.

There will be 23 actions to choose from, covering:

- soil health
- hedgerows
- integrated pest management
- nutrient management
- farmland wildlife on arable and horticultural land, and improved grassland
- buffer strips
- low input grassland

There is no minimum area of land required and the agreement can be based on as many or as few actions as works for the farm.

Tenants

Importantly, the permission of a Landlord to enter tenanted land into the SFI scheme is not required. An applicant will simply be asked to confirm that they expect to have management control of the land for the duration of the three year agreement.

Payment Rates

An SFI applicant will be paid three monthly for the actions undertaken. There will be an opportunity on the yearly anniversary of the start of the applicant's agreement to add more land or actions to receive further payments.

Management Payment

In addition to the payments available for performing the actions, an annual management payment will also be paid to reflect the administrative costs of signing up and taking part. The management payment is £20 per hectare, for up to 50 hectares of land entered into the scheme.

Countryside Stewardship Scheme

It is possible to have both an SFI and CSS agreement, so long as there is no double funding. In practice there is a lot of cross over between the CSS options and SFI actions so it will be a case of systematically going through both schemes to determine what is appropriate for your farm.
